Cover Letter

Dear Ms Vogel,

I moved to Berlin this year and would like to continue the work I know best: installing furniture properly. Seven years in Dublin and London taught me the whole cycle - reading plans, protecting the site, building true, and walking the customer through the result.

On commercial fit-outs I learned to be reliable against a programme: when the schedule says handover Friday, the client signs off Friday. Safety on occupied sites is standard practice for me - safe lifting, protected routes, PPE, clean areas. Quality is in the adjustments: even reveals, true doors, no snag list at the end.

Installation is team work - I have run two-person crews as the senior installer, so teamwork and short, clear communication on site come naturally, and customers consistently rate my walkthroughs highly.

My German is still at the beginning (A2, weekly course), and I am committed to improving it quickly - I already understand site instructions better every week. I would start where the work plan and drawings lead the way and grow into customer-facing service as my German grows.

Sincerely, Colin Murphy
