Cover Letter

Dear Ms Lang,

You are looking for a furniture technician who can both install and repair - that combination has been my daily work in hotels for five years. When a guest-room wardrobe door no longer closes or a conference chair wobbles, I am the one who fixes it before the next check-in.

I work with a clear routine: assess, measure, repair or replace, and hand back on time - guests experience us as reliable, and that is the standard I would bring to your customers. Safety matters in occupied buildings: safe lifting, protected walkways, and clean, secured work areas are normal for me, not an extra. Quality for me is a repair nobody notices afterwards - even gaps, stable fittings, intact surfaces.

I am used to working alone in a structured way, and I coordinate daily with housekeeping, reception and external trades. Communication with guests and customers is part of my job: I explain what I will do, agree times, and keep promises.

I look forward to showing you my repair book and references.

Sincerely, David Osei
