Cover Letter

Dear Mr Brecht,

I finished my apprenticeship as a carpenter this summer and have spent the last six months on your competitor's installation crew - assembling fitted wardrobes, learning from an experienced technician every day. Now I am looking for a team where I can grow, and your assembly and service department is exactly that.

What I can already do: prepare and pre-assemble parts correctly, work from assembly instructions and drawings, use my tools safely, and keep a tidy, protected work area in customers' homes. What I am still learning: the speed of a full working day and handling difficult customers on my own - my senior colleague currently leads that part and I support the handover.

I am dependable: my trainer could always rely on me to be on site on time and to check my work twice. Quality matters more to me than speed - straight cabinets, clean edges, no callbacks. I like working in a two-person team, I ask questions early, and I am used to clear communication with the workshop and with customers.

I would be happy to start with service calls and smaller installs.

Sincerely, Julian Reuter
