Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing to apply for the doctoral researcher position in machine learning advertised by your faculty. I completed my Master of Science in Computer Science at Technische Universitaet Darmstadt in 2023 and have since been working as a software engineer, where I noticed how much I miss the research questions of my thesis.

During my studies I focused on machine learning and statistical data analysis; my thesis evaluated deep learning models for time-series anomaly detection. Working in industry has made me a careful communicator - I write design documents, present to stakeholders, and collaborate across teams daily - and I would bring that professionalism back into academia.

Your group's combination of methodological depth and interdisciplinary projects, together with its commitment to open science, is exactly the environment I am looking for. I would be happy to contribute Python engineering experience, teaching assistance from my tutoring semesters, and a disciplined, collaborative work style.

Kind regards, Daniel Osman
