Dear Hiring Manager,

I am excited to apply for the doctoral researcher position in your machine learning group. I know my path is unusual: I studied applied computer science, work as a frontend developer, and discovered my enthusiasm for machine learning through a twelve-week bootcamp, where my final project on churn prediction was the most fun I have had with code.

I am fully aware that my theoretical foundations in machine learning and statistics need deepening, and that my degree is a Bachelor's. I am a fast learner, I communicate well with clients and colleagues every day, and I bring real software engineering discipline to any team.

If there is any way to contribute to your group - as a doctoral candidate with preparatory coursework or in another role - I would be grateful for the chance to prove myself.

Kind regards, Tom Brandt
